The New York City Fire Museum, housed in a 1904 Beaux-Arts firehouse in Hudson Square, protects and preserves over 150 years of FDNY history. Our collection features historic fire apparatus, equipment, artifacts, and artwork that tell the story of the world's most iconic fire department.

The Museum is temporarily closed for public safety. As a self-funded nonprofit, this unexpected closure has created significant challenges in maintaining our operations and preserving our irreplaceable collection.

Honorees

Michael Barasch

Michael Barasch, Managing Partner at Barasch & McGarry, has committed his career to support the 9/11 community. After the September 11th attacks, he advocated for those exposed to harmful toxins, notably representing NYPD detective James Zadroga, whose death led to the "James Zadroga 9/11 Health and Compensation Act" and the reopening of the 9/11 Victim Compensation Fund (VCF). Barasch's lobbying efforts were crucial in securing the fund's reauthorization and full funding, including the "Never Forget the Heroes Act" in 2019, which ensured over $10 billion in permanent VCF funding. His firm now represents nearly 50,000 responders and survivors, recovering over $3 billion for victims and their families, and he remains dedicated to their fight for justice and health.

NYCHA Fire Safety Training Group

The NYCHA Fire Safety Training Group is a collaborative effort aimed at improving fire safety education in New York City's public housing. It includes stakeholders from FDNY and NYCHA, focusing on fire safety challenges in underserved areas. Their initiatives involve targeted training, community outreach, and raising awareness about fire risks, such as lithium-ion batteries. By empowering residents with knowledge and resources, the group enhances fire prevention and emergency response, protecting the lives of many New Yorkers.
